One hundred yards ss out in the lead by perhaps two feet lapped right on his port half a length came Withington ng his best to hold the killing pace, but while Shepherd and Shea were of it, losing distance with

The Arundel Boat Club crew, of Bailsire, rowed to a dead heat against the Club, of Washington, in junior eight shells after a battle bich will long linger in the minds of most to the finish the lads from mac showed the way, their blades flashby in perfect unison as they tore through the murky water. Not more than a quar ter of a length separated the Southern mys as they drove the shells along, but that advantage, slight as it was, seemed mough to win for the Potomac crew oming down by the rocks, however, Mesexamith, stroke of the Arundel, raised his stroke and came up on even terms. from then on it was a ding-dong battle. and the flag dropped and raised in one motion as the boats swept over the line. The Potomac crew was also entered in the intermediate race, and although the Arundels were not, the committee decided to allow them to row off the dead heat with the Potomac crew. The Metropolitan Boat Club's crew won the race easily, but Arundal finished a good second, a comfortable distance in advance of the Petomac crew, thereby winning the medals for the junior race.
